ALDERMAN SALOONIST FINED $700

WILL COTNTY DEPUTIES RAID MOKENA ALDERMAN'S SALOON; SEIZE MOONSHINE, PUNCH BOARD

Deputies Stanley Kozlowski and Samuel Bailey, working out of the office of Sheriff John Walker of Joliet, raided the saloon of Geo. Wannemacher at Mokena Monday night about 7:30 and found a punch board, some moonshine, whiskey and wine.

The deputies took this evidence and Wannemacher to Joliet, but the latter was released upon furnishing bail bond.

Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock he was arraigned before Justice Alex McCowan who assessed a fine of $200 and costs against him for operating a gambling device. He was next given a hearing in the county court where he was assessed another fine of $500 and costs for selling intoxicating liquors. After paying both fines and costs he was released.

Wannemacher is a member of the village board of Mokena, having held the office of alderman for several years.

Mrs. Geo. Hauser, Aged 80 Years, Dies

Mrs. George Hauser, Sr., aged 80 years, died last Wednesday at the home of her son George of Mokena following an illness of about six months duration.

Mrs. Hauser came to this part of the country from Germany when a young girl and has resided in this vicinity for 68 years. She lived in Joliet for a few years of this time. Her husband passed away 25 years ago. She is survived by one son, George of Mokena and one daughter, Mrs. C. Kern of Riverdale and a number of grand children.

Funeral services were last Saturday morning at Mokena from the St. Mary Catholic church with burial in St. Mary's cemetery.

Herbert Hohenstein Is Granted Divorce

Herbert Hohenstein of Mokena who charged his wife with cruelty, has been granted a decree of divorce by default.

The husband charged that on several occasions his wife beat and struck him with her fists, causing him pain as well as annoyance.

On one occasion, he claims, she threatened to shoot him because he attempted to correct her in carrying a rifle while they were hunting together.

The couple married April 22, 1921 and separated June 2, 1924. The husband claims that on the latter date his wife left him and went back to Canada, where her home was. Hohenstein was represented by Edward G. Purkhiser.

Mokena Men's Club Elects Officers

The Board of Directors of the Mokena Men's Club have elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

A. F. Maue, President
John Balaz, Vice President
Clifford Knudson, Secretary
Lester Schiek, Treasurer
Ben Young, Director

The club has engaged two special deputies for duty on the dance grove for the entire season to keep perfect order at all of the dances.

The club announces the following picnic dates, which it will be well to clip and save for reference:

May 16 and 30th; June 13, and 27th; July 4th and 18th; August 1st, 15th and 29th; Sept. 7th, 12th and 26th; October 3rd and 17th.

Victor Solberg of New Lenox Twp. Reported Missing

Victor Solberg, who has been tenanted the George Pester farm 2 miles west of New Lenox, disappeared under mysterious circumstances a week ago Thursday and nothing has been heard of him since.

He told his wife when he left home that he would be gone for a few days as he was seeking a signer to go on a note for $1000 which he was to renew with the Manhattan bank. Nothing has been heard or seen of him since. The day he left he drew several hundred dollars out of the bank, so the theory of foul play is not being entertained. He left his wife and a little boy in rather dire straits. As there are quite a number of creditors, the stock and farm machinery is to be sold at auction next Monday and whatever the proceeds are, will be used toward paying the creditors. Mrs. Solberg and her little son will go back and live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Pester for the present. E. J. Pester is handling the sale for Mrs. Pester and is doing all he can to help her in her hour of distress.

C. M. Cleveland, Mokena Speaks Before Ind., Solons

The proposed 20th amendment, better known as the Child Labor Act is being fought strongly by many factions, but a large majority of the people have no more idea of what the proposed amendment is, then they have of flying.

C. M. Cleveland, Will County Director of the Milk Producers Association, who has had much experience in legislative work during the past year, is giving addresses at various places showing why the proposed amendment should be overwhelming defeated. The past week he spoke before a large gathering of the German-American Woman's Club with a membership of 600 in Chicago. Practically all the members were present and when they saw the menace lurking in the proposed act, they too, were ready to lend their influence to fight the measure. Mr. Cleveland also spoke at Harvard recently.

On Thursday morning Mr. Cleveland spoke on the same subject before the Indiana Legislature at Indianapolis. He has also spoken at various other gatherings in Indiana and Wisconsin during the past few weeks.

Mokena Youth Injured When Car Backs Into Ditch

Last Wednesday night while Ralph Hacker of Mokena was returning from a dance at New Lenox he met with a rather serious accident near the dance hall. While he was trying to back on the Lincoln Highway near the hall his car landed in the ditch, pinning him under the car in such a way that he received an injury on his leg. Being alone at the time he was unable to extricate himself. Some passing autoist saw his plight and came to his rescue. Those remaining in the dance hall were notified and took him to Silver Cross hospital at Joliet where he remained until Thursday afternoon when he was brought home. He is recovering nicely at latest reports.

Tinley Park Wants Parent-Teachers Association

A movement is on foot to organize a Parent Teachers Association in Tinley Park. The mothers of the school children had a meeting at the new school one day last week and the proposition was discussed from various sides but nothing definite was done as the mothers felt they were not well enough posted on the workings of such an organization. They decided to get further information on the functions of the organization.

It is probable that this proposed association will be organized at a near date. It will be a fine thing if it comes to be a realization. Parents should co-operate with the teachers in order to get the best results.

Tinley Park Farm Brings $340 an Acre

George Hartman of Tinley Park has sold his farm consisting of 78 acres to Henry Campe of Matteson for a reported consideration of $340 per acre. It is understood that Mr. Hartman expects to go on a trip to Canada soon.

Mr. Campe sold his farm near Matteson sometime ago to a real estate concern for $350 per acre.

Mrs. Paul Heisner Of Frankfort, Dies

Mrs. Paul Heisner who has been ill with pneumonia, died at her home Monday morning at 11:30. She leaves to mourn her loss besides her husband, a brother, Rev. Lepper of Chicago, and other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held from her late home in Frankfort, Thursday afternoon to the St. Peter Evangelical church, Rev. Frye, pastor of the German Methodist church of Green Garden officiating, assisted by Rev. G. Lambrecht. Burial was in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Heisner attained the age of 70 years.

MOKENA LAD DISAPPEARS
Otto Bormet who has been working for Harry Mall disappeared under mysterious circumstances last week and has not been heard of.

WAS Dr. Lancaster a human fiend or a noble soul subjected to malign influences? Were two personalities locked within his body? Were his strange and contrasting characteristics the result of using a drug? Should pure and womanly Joan Wentworth have given her heart into the keeping of such a man? The Truant Soul

By Victor Rousseau

We have selected this story for its fascinating merit, its pure love interest, its stirring manner of narration and for the light it throws upon certain peculiarities of conduct, certain soul manifestations and mental phantasies that come to people otherwise normal. Its episodes and emotional qualities are dramatic in the extreme and it contains not a dull passage, and what is singularly pleasing and satisfying.

The CLEARING HOUSE

Editor News-Bulletin:-

If ever I was glad for such a column as the Clearing House it is now, and I only regret that more regret that more of the readers of this paper don't take advantage of the offer the Editor has given us to use the columns of his fine paper. I have something that I feel as a good citizen of the best country on earth I ought to say, and that is; that the long expected has really happened at last in Mokena, when George Wannemacher was arrested Monday night for selling that damnable moonshine, and the best of all is, that the goods was found in his possession so he cannot deny that he has not been selling the stuff, as he has done.

He always has been saying that nothing wrong was going on in his place of business? (rotten business it is then) and he felt very indignant when Mokena village officials of which he is one, sometime ago called him on the carpet for not taking down the shades from his saloon windows so as to allow an unobstructed view of the interior of his saloon either by day or night.

Here is a fine example of our public officials. This man holds the office of village alderman, and took an oath of office to uphold the laws and turn right about and violates the laws of his own country and then tries to deny his guilt until he is caught with the goods. A fine spectacle this is for a public official now isn't it? Now is the time to do a little house cleaning right here at home, and when we keep a clean house at home we will have clean and noble men to represent us at large. I say, and that is the mind of the rest of Mokena, that Mokena is disgraced by having a public official representing its citizens, who himself is a confessed law violator. Citizens of this village must see to it that this alderman is removed from office this spring and no saloonist or bootlegger has any business to hold any public office, for they are law violators and will not uphold the right.

For a long time this Mokena saloon has been suspected of being a moonshine joint but there was no direct proof. But the raid of Monday night showed that the suspicion was well founded. Many of our young men have been getting drunk and the question has been often asked, "Where do they get it?"

Now just think of young men who should be spending their time and lives in nobler ways, drinking the vile poison and paying a big price for it, while on the other hand they had no time or money for the church or anything that stands for better living and citizenship.

Now that the expose is complete, we should not be content with this fellow getting off with a mere fine, which they can so easily make again, but the place should be padlocked and closed so no more can dam their souls.

Here is a public official who wantonly refused to remove the shades from the windows of his saloon for fear the light would expose his nefarious trade and who even had the nerve to say in open board meeting, that if anyone thought anything wrong was going on in his place they should come and investigate, thus trying to pose as a good little angel when he knew all the time that he was dispensing a liquor that undermines the health of those who use it.

These fellows pose as front pew polishers on Sundays in church and then on week days do all kinds of wicked deeds and defile our laws and get by with it. Every dog has his day they say, and it is about time that these fellows are meeting their Waterloo.

Oak Lawn Police Chief Surprised on 23rd Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eichler, the former being Oak Lawn's Chief of Police, celebrated their 23rd wedding anniversary on Monday evening January 12. The affair was a surprise on Mrs. Eichler, planned and carried out by the Chief and their daughter, Marcella and son Arthur Jr. The following prominent Oak Lawn people were present: Mrs. Newmer and daughter Pearl, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. Doyle, Mrs. John J. O'Conner, Mr. and Mrs. E. Brubach, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rowan and son Robert, Mr. and Mrs. W. McFarlan, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Winkelman, and last but not least, Sparky.

The Chief had the pleasure of carving a large turkey while Mrs. Eichler cut the wedding cake.

Among the many presents was a chest of silver from their son and daughter and a beautiful platinum watch to Mrs. Eichler from the Chief himself.

Everybody had a very enjoyable evening and decided to go home at 2:30 A. M. Tuesday.

Bunco party for Hall Fund Well Attended

The second bunco party given by the Catholic church of Mokena for their proposed hall fund, was held Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Horras. The basement of the home was converted into a private hall and 19 tables played. Refreshments were served.

Dollar Day Sale A Success

Tinley Park's first Dollar Day sale put on by Harry Bettenhausen, local auto supply and radio dealer last Saturday, went over big according to Mr. Bettenhausen. He was well pleased with the results.

State Asks For Continuance Of Joe Greco Case

The cases filed by Joe Greco of Tinley Park against two well known and reputable citizens of that town, Fred Schmiedknecht and Valentine Scheer, were called for trial the 2nd time in Chicago Heights, by Justice David H. Shapiro, January 22nd and continued again on motion of the States Attorney and Judge Barasa and set for January 30th on the plea that the State was not ready and that they did not know enough about the case to go ahead with it.

Greco had been given from Jan. 12 to Jan. 20th to get ready and on the 20th he asked for a continuance to the 22nd. This is peculiar in view of the fact that these defendants were arrested in such a hurry at midnight of January 12th.

The defendants are represented by Attorneys Francis A. Harper of Tinley Park, J. D. K. and D. K. Lindhout of Chicago Heights, who argued very strongly against the continuance, stating that they had been ready all the time to go ahead with the case and wanted immediate trial to clear the names of the defendants, and that it was not fair to them. The lawyers for the defendants argued that it appeared like a case of extortion because Greco owes the defendants money.

It would seem that any of our reputable citizens like the above men may be arrested by somebody on some flimsy charge and their reputation dragged thru the by any irresponsible person, say many of our citizens. The many friends of the defendants hope that they will get a fair trial.

Mokena Girl Scouts Earn Health Badges

The Mokena Girl Scouts are very active. The Senior Scouts have all passed their second class test with averages above 90. Several are now eligible for health badges earned last year.

The Junior and Brownie Scouts held a party at the school Monday night. Each had as a guest a little brother or sister or a borrowed one. Refreshments were served and all declared they had a pleasant time.

DOCTOR AND NURSE

Now Joan could see his face, and, to her astonishment, it did not bear the expression of the smirking bully whom she had seen that morning, nor yet of the man who had addressed another man in such terms as one might use to a slave. It was not an unkindly face. And it was unmistakably that of a sick man.

For a moment she remembered the stories told of his behavior in the operating theater, of the gentleness that seemed to transform the man, as if he possessed a dual personality.

"I am Miss Wentworth," she explained. "I came to ask if you won't reconsider your decision to suspend me. I always wanted to be a nurse. Doctor Lancaster, apart from my own interests, I want to graduate to be able to help others. Won't you give me another opportunity?"

Here are hero and heroine. The reader who wants mystery, plot, action and a real love story can get it here in "The Truant Soul."

Is it a story of dual personality or of an impostor and his victim? Is the woman with the maternal instinct the best wife as well as the best nurse? Can a victim of the morphine habit be permanently cured? These are questions the reader asks himself as he reads.

The author is Victor Rousseau, whose many stories of American life have given him a large public.

Chapter I

—1—

"I let him see I wouldn't stand for any language like that, and I reckon he understood, even if I didn't have to say much," remarked the dark-haired girl to Joan Wentworth. "It doesn't seem to have occurred to Doctor Lancaster yet that a nurse is a human being under her uniform."

"If he'd treat us half as nicely as he treats some of his lady friends," she added, in a suggestive tone that changed into the accentuation of ordinary speech under Joan's discouraging look. "I've seen him driving them round town nights in his auto, and I've never seen the same one twice. I guess he takes it out on us when they've been mean to him."

Joan did not answer her. She was watching the head surgeon as he came trance the general buzz of conversation ceased, as if the outpouring of words had been cut off with a knife. The students on the benches settled themselves in their places and craned their heads forward intently. The two assistant surgeons, Ivers and MacPherson, assumed attitudes of constraint, for everybody was constrained in Lancaster's presence. The orderly, who had been peering through the crack of the swinging door into the anesthetic room, where the head nurse was holding the patient's wrist and watching the face beneath the mask intently, straightened himself and stood up in military fashion. Only the visiting doctors seemed at their ease as they advanced to shake hands with John Lancaster.

They had come from several neighboring cities, drawn by the news that Lancaster was to perform his famous operation of arterial excision, which was just then the subject of discussion in the medical press. Plenty of surgeons had tried to remove a section of one of the larger blood vessels, but only Lancaster had succeeded in bringing down the mortality to 15 per cent.

Lancaster was something of a mystery both to his colleagues and to the nursing staff. The Lancaster fund supported the Southern hospital, and John Lancaster was firmly established at the head of the institution. The board of guardians, which existed according to the terms laid down in his father's will, had apparently only an advisory capacity, and it was supple and plastic in Lancaster's hands. And John Lancaster was more feared and admired than any doctor in the country.

Fearing most for his tyranny, admired by a very few on account of his extraordinary skill, he seemed to have a dual personality. The man whose fast life was the scandal of the conservative little southern seaport, who was ostracized by the better families, whose infrequent appearances in the hospital were usually the occasion for injustice, storms and dismissals, changed in the operating theater into a man whose gentleness and humility and skill made him adored for the time by all who came into contact with him. But it was only rarely that a case occurred that required his attention.

On such occasions his manner was in itself remarkable. He would slip stealthily into his private room, dress there, and emerge masked like a mummy to perform his miracle almost in silence, and afterward to make his escape in a way suggestive of his having performed some shameful action.

So much Joan Wentworth had heard. Naturally she watched his entrance on this, her first day of surgical work, with absorbed interest. But Lancaster came in unmasked, and Joan could discern nothing humble or secretive in the self-satisfied face or the brisk manner in which he greeted the visiting surgeons.

He looked a man of seven or eight and thirty, and he bore his years heavily. The eyes were lined and a little sunken; the features, which Joan had seen only a few times during her eighteen months of work at the hospital, exercised, as they had always done, a rather repellent effect upon the girl. The face was eminently cruel and hard. Nevertheless the man obviously dominated the assembly.

He dominated her. She was much more afraid of some nervous lapse in Lancaster's presence than of seeing the use of the knife. The hissing of the steam tank, the nervous movements of the spectators upon the benches, whose heads seemed to swing with a uniform and rhythmical motion, the deepening sense of constraint, acted upon her with a sort of hypnotic effect not lessened by Lancaster's decisive manner.

She pulled the tray of instruments out of the boiling water and set it down upon the table by the side of the bichloride solution. Lancaster, who had been pulling on his rubber gloves, came to her side and plunged both hands into the antiseptic fluid. There was a look of self-conscious satisfaction upon his face, and Joan thought that every gesture and each movement was designed to impress the visitors. Presently she became sure of it. The man was acting. A feeling of disgust came over her.

Lancaster cast a quick glance at Joan.

"New nurse?" he asked. "My first morning of surgical work, Doctor Lancaster," she answered.

He grunted in a contemptuous sort of way. Joan flushed to the hair. He turned to the other girl.

"You there!" he shouted. "Look alive with those sponges!" And he cast a quick glance toward the visitors, as if to see whether they appreciated his harshness.

A look of chagrin came over the dark-haired girl's face, but she ran to obey and dropped the wet sponges into the bichloride with shaking fingers. At the same moment the swing door opened and the stretcher with the patient appeared, wheeled by the orderly. Behind it walked the head nurse, still maintaining her crouching attitude as she moved. The stretcher stopped inside the theater, and the head nurse and orderly lifted the man who lay upon it on the glass table.

He mumbled and tried to raise himself. The nurse put her hands about his shoulders, pressing them down, while the orderly held the body, protesting against the indignity about to be offered to it, to which it had emphatically not consented, whatever arrangement had been decreed by the brain. Lancaster's harsh voice boomed through the theater: "That's no way to bring a patient here, Miss Symons! Deep anesthesia!"

The head nurse lifted her face for an instant. "There's a history of nephritis, Doctor Lancaster," she said. "The pulse is 150, and Doctor MacPherson said—"

"Who's running this business?" shouted Lancaster, striding toward her; and Joan was sure that he looked out of the corner of his eye toward the visitors.

He snatched the green ether bottle out of the nurse's hand and poured a quantity of the fluid upon the mask. The struggle ceased, and the man sighed deeply, and his limbs relaxed. The nauseating stench of the ether fumes made Joan's head reel. It seemed to fill the theater. Miss Symons, flushing, but displaying no resentment, took the bottle from Lancaster's hand and resumed her position, holding the patient's wrist and peering into his face, the green bottle upraised.

The girl who was in charge of the sponges whispered bitterly to her: "He doesn't know how to treat a woman—not a lady. He isn't our kind. My! he must have been on a terrible racket last night! He can't keep up that gait much longer unless he gives up his work here."

Joan ignored her; she had concentrated all her attention upon Lancaster's probable demands; she was resolved not to be found wanting. It was said that Lancaster was absolutely merciless and had ruined many a girl's career by refusing to allow her to complete her graduating course. He was tyrannical, overlooked nothing, and never appreciated good work. Rumor went that when a certain nurse had once handed him benzine instead of alcohol he had taken her by the shoulders and run her bodily out of the hospital, forbidding her to show her face there again.

"He can't last long if he leads that sort of life," the dark-haired girl repeated. "You'd think he'd be old enough to have learned how to pretend to be a gentleman even if he isn't one."

Joan shook her off mentally as one chases away a persistent fly. For the tenth time she counted the instruments in the tray. Lancaster picked up a scalpel, and MacPherson and Ivers took up their positions, one on either side of him. The operation was beginning.

The visiting surgeons watched with an occasional whispered remark. The assistants already were snapping the little forceps upon the ends of the divided arteries. Lancaster issued his commands from time to time, without looking back:

"Sponges!"

"One—two," whispered the dark-haired girl. "Three—four—five—"

"Bistouri. Scissors. Dilator. Number four Simms."

Joan never faltered. She felt easier in her mind, her quick hands found the instruments in the tray the moment Lancaster demanded them. Meanwhile the dark-haired girl never ceased counting the sponges:

"Six—seven—eight—nine—"

Suddenly Lancaster stopped, wheeled and turned fiercely upon her. "For God's sake, stop that chatter!" he cried.

The girl let a sponge fall, snatched it up, and shot an apprehensive glance at him. Joan saw that she was losing her nerve in spite of her brave talk of a few minutes before. It was the critical time of a very dangerous and difficult process. She tried to pull herself together.

Yet, without looking up, she realized that a sense of general apprehension had stolen through the operating theater. The nurse at the head of the table, looking like a veiled Vestal, had not shifted her position since the beginning of the operation, except that from time to time her hand shifted slightly as she let one or two drops of ether fall upon the mask. MacPherson and Ivers stirred busily, their heads bent level with their chief's as they moved to and fro at their work. The patient began to mutter. Then a hand, upraised in weak protest, struck a clamp from Ivers' fingers. It rattled upon the floor.

"Keep him quiet, Miss Symons, confound you!" shouted Lancaster.

"Doctor Lancaster, the pulse—" she began. But, after a quick glance at the head surgeon, she shrugged her shoulders, tilted the bottle, and deliberately poured out nearly all the ether remaining in it. The renewed stench of the anesthetic filled the room. Joan saw the benches swing, the craning faces seemed to become multiplied; Lancaster and the two assistants, the visiting surgeons were tiny gnomes, an immense distance away, surrounding a tiny table on which a doll-like figure lay extended. She tried to bring them back into focus, but could not; and, what was worse, she felt that she had lost her nurse's sense of divining the surgeon's requirements before he gave expression to them.

The feeling of suspense was growing. Something was wrong, and although nothing had been said, even the students on the top row of benches farthest from the table were aware of it. The assistant doctors appeared as busy as ever, and yet they seemed at a loss, and once or twice looked up at Lancaster as if his technic was puzzling them. Joan saw two of the visiting surgeons exchange brief glances, one with inquiry, the other, answering, with uplifted eyebrows. Once Lancaster stopped; he resumed his work, stopped again, and stood staring at his work. Then he wheeled round upon Joan, the upper part of his body seeming to move upon a pivot, while his lower limbs remained stationary.

This is certainly a bad beginning for both hero and heroine—surgeon and nurse. What next?

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Permanent roads are a good investment—not an expense.

Road Building Far Behind the Automobile

Millions now recognize the automobile as a necessity. It is no longer a luxury for the few. Sixty per cent of its use is for business.

Because of this the modern paved highway has become an economic necessity.

Yet although the mileage of Concrete Roads and Streets has been steadily increasing, our highway system today lags far behind the automobile. The great majority of our highways are as out of date as the single-track, narrow gauge railway of fifty years ago.

Such a condition not only seriously handicaps the progress of the automobile as a comfortable, profitable means of transportation, but also holds back commercial, industrial and agricultural advancement in practically every section of the country. It is costing taxpayers millions of dollars annually.

Highway building should be continued and enlarged upon.

Wheat Fields Outline Walls of Ancient Town

Lines of the walls and streets of an ancient Roman town, Magna Castra, near Hereford, England, are plainly visible in the wheat fields near there. The crops grow shorter where there is less depth of soil and show the entire plan of the town.

Excavations have been made there and the foundations of the old forum have been discovered. Magna was one of the smallest of the British-Roman towns, having an extent of only 25 acres and was probably used for a stopping point for troops on the way to the great wall.

The complete skeleton of a British woman has also been unearthed there, together with much dateable material. Pottery dating from the time of Antoninus Pius, 138-161 A. D., to Valens, 364-378 A. D., with the stamp of the potter has been found. A perfect bronze bracelet for a child, with its catch complete, was among the discoveries.

There is a tradition that Magna was burned, either by Saxons or by native tribes.

Boschee's Syrup

Allays irritation, soothes and heals throat and lung inflammation. The constant irritation of a cough keeps the delicate mucus membrane of the throat and lungs in a congested condition, which BOSCHEE'S SYRUP gently and quickly heals. For this reason it has been a favorite household remedy for colds, coughs, bronchitis and especially for lung troubles in millions of homes all over the world for the last fifty-eight years, enabling the patient to obtain a good night's rest, free from coughing with easy expectation in the morning. You can buy BOSCHEE'S SYRUP wherever medicines are sold.—Adv.

On the Trail of Crime

The detective made his way up the stairs of the office building and presented himself at the door of the music academy.

"Excuse me," he said to the young lady who opened the door, "but I hope you'll give me what information you have and not make a fuss."

"What do you mean?" was the indignant question.

"Why, that little affair—you know," said the detective.

"I don't understand you at all," replied the young lady, frowningly.

"Why, we got a tip from the house next door that somebody here has been murdering Wagner and I've been sent along to look into the case."

Her Impression

A woman from the country was taking her five-year-old girl on her first visit to the zoo. The child had never been in the city before, nor ridden in a motorbus, and she looked around in amazement, which was deepened when her attention was called to a group of giggling flappers, who were boastfully exchanging reminiscences as to "He sez to me," etc. Suddenly the child turned to her mother and asked in a penetrating voice, "Say, mumsie, is this the zoo?"

"OLD-SALT" TALES

By CAPTAIN IRA PERKINS

(Copyright.)

Snake Gold

"SMASH! A rifle bullet crashed through the binnacle lamp in the forward deck house, and the islands"—the captain had plunged straight into his yarn.

"In those days I was just a young lad not a mite bigger than some of you who are listening to my tale. It was before steam had come much into use. Our ship was an old-time sloop fitted with a special clipper rig overhead and in her day there were few of her size afloat to whom she couldn't show a clean pair of heels.

"We had put to sea over two months before. The day we sailed there had been overmuch whispering, and coming and going, and taking on of strange parcels, as I thought at the time. Few of the others seemed to mark it though, which set my mind more or less at ease. I said nothing. Many a time after did I think how much better it would have been had I voiced my fears aloud and perhaps in that way have saved the life of many a good seaman who's only fault was that he had shipped in a boat along with the devil—or it may be one of his prime ministers.

"Never was there a harder working or a better-minded crew than ours when we left port. We had scarce been two days out of harbor though, when the devil began to show his presence. And the devil in this case was no other than our skipper, Captain Lorsin.

"There was none who saw him do the first shooting. But there were few of us who did not see his poor victim lying stark upon the deck. From that moment Captain Lorsin was a hated man—and a doomed one.

"Our destination was set down in the ship's papers as Lima, Peru; but it was with no thought of making Lima that Captain Lorsin had sailed. He had got hold of a copy of an ancient map showing a certain island off the Chilean coast where Inca gold was said to be hidden. The legend held that it was gold sacred to the snake god and that a curse fell on anyone who touched it. Captain Lorsin must have touched it in his dreams for he never saw it alive; yet he was surely cursed if ever man was.

"It was late in the evening when we at last drifted into the channel at the south end of the island which formed a sort of landlocked harbor. A gray mist hung low over everything. No sounds could be heard distinctly above the rustling of waves sliding up the sand of the beach.

"The bullet which shattered the binnacle lamp came out of this mist cloud. Others followed. Captain Lorsin was hard put to it to know what to do. At last he called into the cabin such men of the crew as he thought he might trust. Rifles were put in their hands. Then the fight was on. It lasted most of the night, with our men aiming at the rifle flashes which spat out at us through the darkness.

"Just before dawn the firing died out. As the sun rose, I saw another ship of much the same size and form as our own. There was a 'Halloo' from the other's deck. Our mate called back. In a few minutes we were all gathered at the rail and shouting across at one another.

"As we talked there came a sudden explosion between decks. Several men rushed down to see what it was. I shall never forget the look in Captain Lorsin's eyes when they came back bearing him between them. Apparently he had hidden a lot of ammunition in the hold and it had exploded when he had attempted to get at some of it. He was mortally hurt. A little later our boat began to sink appreciably in the water and we got into the lifeboats, taking with us whatever things could be easily borne.

"Captain Lorsin died before we reached the shore. The captain of the other ship had been killed by a rifle bullet. He had got his pay for starting the fight. His thought had been to drive us away, so that he might get the entire treasure for himself. It seems that he had got word of the island at about the same time as Captain Lorsin, and had scarce more than reached it when we arrived. Between them, in their love of gold, these two men had been the means of killing eight true, honest seamen and wounding twelve more.

"As for the gold, we found no real gold on the island. There was only the snake-gold of the Indian legend. We came upon the Indian gold as soon as we started to climb about on the rocks back of us. It was infested with sort of yellow snakes which glittered golden bright in the sunshine."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

"COMMON COLDS" ARE TOO COMMON

"COMMON colds" are the most common illnesses in the United States, says Dr. Hugh Cummings, surgeon general of the United States Public Health service. During the last year this service has been making an investigation of colds. It finds that, out of every one hundred persons, only ten have no colds during the year, that ninety will have one or two each winter or an average of nearly four every year.

Now there are approximately one hundred and ten million people in this country. Of these, eleven million will be free from colds, while the ninety-nine million who have four colds a year will have among them, three hundred and ninety-six million colds every twelve months.

No wonder Doctor Cummings says colds are the commonest disease we have.

These colds are not only unpleasant, they are also expensive. How much is lost in time and wages because of them? How much is paid out for "catarrh cures," cough drops, oils, syrups, poultices and mustard foot baths? Nobody has any idea, but you can be sure that our national cold bill is many times larger than our annual coal bill we hear so much about.

These colds are just the same in different parts of the country. They occur about the same time of the year in every locality. The public health service has found that the first outbreak occurs in October. That's when the first raw, chilly days are apt to appear. We evidently get accustomed to this or protect ourselves better, for after the first outbreak, the number of colds decreases, until the latter part of December when another outbreak occurs.

Then the weather settles down and we adapt ourselves to it again and the number of colds drops off until January. During the late winter and early spring, colds are general. Elderly or delicate persons, who may have their third or fourth attack, when they are weakened and their resistance is reduced, are then especially liable to develop something worse, bronchitis or influenza or the dreaded pneumonia. So that colds, while not generally dangerous to life themselves, are very apt to prove the starting point for other and more serious diseases.

No one likes to have a cold. We'd all be glad to be rid of them. The investigation now being made by the public health service is the first nationwide study of colds ever undertaken. Anything which can be done to reduce this disagreeable pest will be a real service to the public.

AN HEROIC METHOD OF REDUCING

TWENTY years ago Truly Shattuck was a member of the famous Weber and Fields chorus. More than that, she was widely known as having the most perfect figure of any woman on the stage.

Recently the daily papers stated that Miss Shattuck had entered a Chicago hospital weighing 192 pounds and with a waistline of 42 inches, and had been discharged a few days later with a 34-inch waist measure and weighing 123 pounds. Sixty-nine pounds' reduction in a few days is certainly a strenuous method and one that few women care to undertake.

Fat, anywhere in the body or in any amount, is caused by surplus food, over and above the body needs. If we knew exactly how much fuel the body required for its daily work and if each one of us, whether banker, office worker, housekeeper or laborer, ate exactly what we needed and no more, there would be no fat people. Probably the death rate from Bright's disease and diabetes would begin to go down. Certainly a great deal of money would be saved for other uses. Fat is not only unsightly; it's an expensive and useless inconvenience. We pay to get it and we pay to keep it and we pay to get rid of it.

In most cases, fat is deposited under the skin and around the muscles all over the body. It is particularly fond of settling around the waist, on the hips and thighs, but, as a rule, it is fairly evenly distributed. In some cases—why, we do not know—it accumulates in masses in these particular spots, so large that they can be shelled out from the skin very much as the cook shells peas out of pods.

The surgeon, after putting his patient to sleep, cuts through the skin down to the fat, loosens the fat layer removes it in wedge-shaped pieces and sews the skin over the wound. The amount removed depends on the case; from twenty-five pounds to seventy-five pounds have been removed in a single operation. If carefully done by a skilled surgeon, no harm and much benefit may result.

It is doubtful whether this form of reducing will ever become popular. Most women would prefer to keep out of the operating room and to reduce more slowly.

That is wise, but how much wiser to eat less, exercise more and so avoid the necessity for any kind of reduction treatment, either by the surgeon's knife or by fasting.

New Lenox Man Seeks To Oust His Conservator

Petition to remove A. N. Hilton of Symerton, as conservator of the estate of his cousin Geo. S. Hilton, 76 years old, of New Lenox, has been filed by the latter in the probate court and the hearing has been set for Monday.

According to O. R. Laraway, attorney for the conservator, the petition will be contested.

A. N. Hilton was appointed conservator for the estate of George Hilton, Dec. 14, 1923, to protect the aged man's interest. According to the testimony introduced at the hearing in December, 1923, Mr. Hilton was in the habit of keeping large sums of money and securities in a small iron safe in his bedroom. He refused to tell anyone how much money he kept in the safe and likewise refused to put his money and securities in a bank, it was brought out at the hearing.

To protect his wealth Hilton had had electrical burglar alarms installed in his home and kept three guns within his reach at all times.

The jury which heard the case returned a verdict finding Mr. Hilton incompetent to manage his own business affairs and recommended the appointment of a conservator.

Mr. Hilton has filed a petition claiming that he is now competent to manage his own business and asks that the conservator be removed. Mr. Hilton is represented by D. R. Anderson.

Selection of a jury will be started Monday and it probably will be Tuesday before actual hearing of the case will be under way.

WOMAN'S COURAGE FOILS BANDITS

Grapples With Armed Robbers Who Attempt to Hold Up Her Bank.

UNARMED, WINS LONG FIGHT

One Bandit Killed and Other Wounded When Men Come to Rescue—Story Told at National Meeting of Bankers.

When the wave of crime against banks, which has reached unprecedented proportions, was under discussion at the recent meeting of the American Bankers Association at Chicago, and defense measures were up for consideration, the bankers were told how one resolute woman defended herself against two armed desperadoes in her little Western bank. The woman was Mrs. Mary Garlinghouse, cashier of the State Bank of Vera, Oklahoma, which she conducts single-handed. Her own story, as she told it in a report to the protective authorities of the Association, follows:

"While I was posting my ledger, with my back to the door, I heard a commotion. When I turned around there were two men back of the counter, with handkerchiefs over their faces. The larger made a jump for my gun, before I realized what was happening. The robbers each had a gun pointed at me, and one said, 'Lay down or I will shoot you!' I said, 'I will not lay down and you will not shoot me.' This conversation was repeated several times. I told them to cut out their foolishness.

"A man who was in the corridor when the bandits came laid down on the floor, face down. I tried to argue with the robbers and they began to get rough, but something within me seemed to realize that they were getting confused. I kept thinking that some one would come in or see us."

"The larger man got busy with the money, while the smaller one took care of me. He jerked me to my knees and hit me over the head. This jolted my glasses and I lifted my hand, waving it in front of his face and telling him to wait a minute. I took my glasses off and put them on the table. Lifting my hand caused this man to look up and he saw we were observed from across the street. Then he saw Constable Mosby, with his gun, and said to the man who was gathering the money, 'Don, we are seen, we must make our getaway!' He then grabbed me rather roughly and said: 'Come on here! You are coming along!'

Struggles With Robber

"Here is where our struggle began. All the time we fought over his gun. I did not try to take it away from him, but kept moving it from one side to the other, and of course he was determined to point it straight at me. I told him, 'I will not so and I am not afraid of you. You will not shoot me!'

"We fought to the back door of the bank. When we got there, he raised his arm to fire at Mosby. I grabbed him around the neck, and he fired before I could get his hand. I am positive that this man was never hugged so tightly, nor ever will be, as I hugged him, realizing that I must fight for my life. The man tried his level best to kill me. What the other man was doing I do not know. My man was trying to pull me out the back door to their car, which was still running. I was determined he should not. "R. C. Lapsley, the mayor, or Ed. Mosby shot the man in the arm. There was a jerk and out the door we went. Things were coming my way now. I pulled the robber into the weeds, half on his back and half on his left side.

"The robber finally said, 'I will give up.' I said, 'Give me your gun.' He answered, 'I will not; I know you will shoot me.' So the struggle kept on. We got back on our feet. I meant to have his gun and would fight him until I got it. We fought through the back room behind the counter. He begged me not to take him, and I asked him again for his gun and he said, 'No, I know you will shoot me.' We struggled through the front door and then Constable Mosby said, 'Drop your gun or I will shoot you.' The bandit gave up and the men took charge of him.

One Bandit Killed

"I wondered about the other bandit and started to look for him and found him in the closet in the back of the bank dying. R. C. Lapsley told me afterwards that when the bandit and I lurched through the back door the larger man, with his gun in his right hand and the sack of money in his left, stepped up to the door. They both fired at once. The robber dropped his gun and the money, but they could not see what became of him.

"If all towns had as brave men as we have here, bank robbing would be a thing of the past. You can understand the remarkable marksmanship that was displayed, when I tell you that in our struggle at the back of the bank the men took several shots at the robber, but were very careful not to hit me. The robber got a shot in his right arm and a glancing shot in his left.

"All during the shooting and fighting, I felt confident I would get the best of my man. I felt that the man would not shoot me, and like all Western women did not lose my nerve. Bank robbers, as a rule, are cowards and if one shows that he is not afraid of them they will lose their nerve."

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON SAVING AND INVESTING

Aunt Emmy and Maud were talking about saving money.

"What does a savings bank do with the money people put in it, Aunt Emmy?" inquired Maud.

"It is invested in sound mortgages, perhaps, or government and corporation securities. You see, the men who run savings banks are trained financiers. They know what securities are good and what are questionable, so they invest the bank's funds—that is, the money they receive from their depositors—in the best securities in such a way that they will be able to pay you interest on your deposits and be able to return your money to you when you want it. In order to do that they must invest in securities that pay a higher rate of interest than they give you to cover the bank expenses and set aside a surplus against emergencies."

"But, Auntie, if the banks invest our money, why can't we invest it ourselves?"

"We could if we knew as much about investments as the bank does. Bankers are not likely to make the mistakes made by the ordinary person. They are not deceived by impressive looking stock certificates, plausible letters from brokers or charming voices over the telephone urging them to buy this or that. Your banker is a hard-headed business man who investigates thoroughly before he invests the bank's money. For this reason many conservative persons prefer to keep their savings in a savings bank, knowing that their money is in wise hands and that even though the rate of interest they get may be moderate their money is far safer than it would be if it were invested less skillfully."

"Surely, though, it must be possible to get more than 4 per cent on your money and yet be safe," Maud said.

"It is under certain conditions," Aunt Emmy agreed. "The trouble is that so few people are frank about their money matters with men who really can be trusted for advice. They would rather take the advice of a glib stock salesman. No matter how small a sum a person is thinking of investing, advice should be sought from a trust company or bank. Women especially don't seem to realize this."

"The savings bank is always safe. It is a good plan to keep putting money in the savings bank until you have a good sum. Then withdraw part and invest it in some security paying a higher rate of interest. But be sure to seek good advice before you buy. In this way you can always have some cash on hand in the bank, yet gradually convert most of your savings into high grade securities."—ANNE B. AYMES.

THE BURDEN OF GOVERNMENT

The financial burden of government has become increasingly heavy in recent years. It has, at times, reached the point of oppression. The Federal tax of 1920 aggregated more than five and one-half billion dollars. This year, after strenuous efforts to reduce the war-time peak, the total still exceeds three billion dollars—a sum far greater than the entire burden of funded debt accumulated as a result of the Civil War. State and local taxes have increased at an even greater rate. Taxation has become more than a problem; it is a threat of impending disaster.

Nor is the burden of government limited to taxation. We are oppressed by a multiplicity of restrictive laws and administrative regulations. It is estimated that there are over two million laws and ordinances in the records of nation, states and municipalities. One adult person out of every twenty engaged in business or industry is a government official, agent or employee.

In the face of this record, despite the general recognition of the overwhelming burden of government, we find ourselves constantly waging a defensive battle against plans and programs which would transfer still greater duties to government, which would hamper individual initiative still further, which will—if put into practice—crush individual ambition and destroy individual opportunity.

Under these circumstances it is our right—it is our duty—to affirm and defend sound principles of political faith as we have, on other occasions, supported sound principles of economic progress. The Constitution of the United States has stood for 135 years as the bulwark of our individual and our collective liberties. The Constitution has been and is now the greatest existing restraint upon an arrogant majority. It has been and is now the greatest existing defense of the very minorities which, at this time, are being led to denounce its restrictions.

One of our greatest needs is to repel the attacks now being made upon the integrity of this charter of our freedom. We should—we must—oppose vigorously all efforts to give Congress the power to override decisions of the Supreme Court—and thereby destroy the division of governmental power which is the inherent strength of our constitutional system.—Walter W. Head, American Bankers Association.

Coughs Always Dangerous—Quick Way to Stop Them

Chronic coughs and chest colds often lead to more serious trouble. Not only is the infection itself dangerous, but the continual coughing spells day and night so weaken your entire system that you can no longer fight off disease.

So stop a cough the quickest way you can. To do this there is nothing better than that old-time tried and proved remedy—Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. Doctors say there is nothing like pine-tar extract to quickly loosen and remove the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the cough, while the honey both gives a pleasant taste and helps soothe the irritation. The quick relief to the stubbornest cough often seems almost magical.

But be sure you get the genuine Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, and no substitute. Dr. Bell's is the original pine-tar-honey and has been known for over a quarter of a century as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine-tar, honey and other quick-acting, healing ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in quick relief. Contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, so can be given even to young children—fine for spasmodic cough. If you want the best, a medicine that often relieves the severest cough overnight, make sure you get Dr. Bell's. Only 30c at any good druggist.

Most Difficult Things in Life.
A Danish paper recently asked the readers to state what is the hardest thing in the world to do. It received many more replies than it had anticipated, some of which are as follows: To be a toe dancer if you weigh 200 pounds, to get back borrowed books, to trim one's nails while wearing boxing gloves. Some of the readers took the question seriously and answered it seriously. One replied that to live without telling a lie was the most difficult of all.

"With What Body Do They Come?"

By REV. LEW W. GOSNELL
Dean of the Day School, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.—1 Cor. 15:38.

In a certain city, a block of stores was vacated and the buildings were being made over.

Signs were displayed showing that the various firms had temporarily moved out. A Christian minister who lived in this city, noticed these signs when he returned home after an absence of several months.

He remarked to his wife, "What a striking picture of death for the believer! If I should be called home to be with the Lord before you, and you wished to put a slab of some kind where my body lies, you might have it read something like this: 'Saved by the grace of God, moved out until renovated and repaired.' That would tell the whole story."

Later he returned home again, after an extended absence. He found the city block made over, so that one could scarcely imagine it had ever looked as once it did. Yet the foundations were the same and also the walls. Again, the minister called the attention of his wife to the parallel with the death of the believer and especially with his resurrection. For in that blessed state we shall have bodies identical with those we now have, just as the stores have the same foundations and walls, yet our bodies shall be transformed more wonderfully than any buildings of earth have ever been.

Our text makes clear that God is quite equal to providing resurrection bodies suitable for the life to come. "God giveth it a body as it hath pleased Him." Paul is speaking of the sowing of seed, whether of wheat or of some other grain. We sow bare grain, but God gives it such a body as pleases Him. Plant and fruit and flower are very different in appearance from the seed sown. So shall be the resurrection body compared with that we now possess.

The resources of God are traced in other spheres. Paul points out that the Creator provides one kind of flesh for men, another for beasts, another for birds, another for fishes. How wonderful it would be to find a fish living submerged in water, if we were not so accustomed to the sight! Paul goes on to show that there are bodies celestial and terrestrial, each with its own fitting glory. He shows that there are various glories in celestial bodies, in the sun, the moon, and the various stars.

The Resurrection Body.

"So, also, is the resurrection of the dead." The God who so provides in various realms will not be at a loss to provide resurrection bodies for His children. Our body is sown in "corruption," subject to disease, decay, death, but it shall be raised in "incorruption," free from decay, imperishable. It is sown in "dishonor," for as it goes to the grave its feeble beauty is gone, but it shall be raised in "glory." It is sown in "weakness," subject to weariness, needing sleep, but it shall be raised in "power." It is sown a "natural body," suited to the soul, but it shall be raised a "spiritual body," adapted to the spirit, the highest element of our nature. In other words, we shall no longer be like the first Adam, but like the last Adam, as He appeared after He was raised from the dead, in that glorious body with which He finally ascended to heaven.

Our text makes plain, however, that while God will give us such bodies as please Him, yet our identity will be preserved. "To every seed his own body." True, plant and fruit and flower are very different from the seed sown. Indeed, they are not composed of the same particles. Yet, a certain plant would never have been saved for a certain seed.

In our own case, the body changes about every seven years, so that the body I now possess probably contains no particle of matter which was in my body of seven years ago. Yet the identity of my body is preserved. My body all through life is conditioned by the body with which I was born, in spite of the change of the particles of matter in it. Just so, the resurrection body, changed as it will be, will be conditioned by the body I have borne in this life, and so identical with it. Incidentally, this bears on the question of heavenly recognition. "Certainly," as an aged Christian remarked to his wife when discussing that question, "we shall not be greater fools there than here."

How we long sometimes for those glories yet to be revealed to us!

"Jerusalem the Golden,
I weary for one gleam
Of all thy glory folden
In distance and in dream.
My thoughts, like palms in exile,
Climb up to look and pray
For a glimpse of thy dear country
That lies so far away."

When God Withdraws

God does not arbitrarily withdraw Himself from His people. If He does withdraw, depend upon it there is something in the temple offensive to Him, something with which He will not dwell.

JESUS COMFORTS HIS DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—John 14:1-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."—John 14:6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Heavenly Home.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Walking in Christ's Way.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Comforts His Disciples.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sources of the Christian's Comfort.

The hopes of the disciples were utterly shattered when Jesus told them about the cross. Jesus had told them that He was going away, and that they could not follow Him. Their hearts were flooded with grief. He consoled them by

I. Pointing to the Reunion in the Father's House (vv. 1-3).

1. He Asks Them to Trust in Him Even as God (v. 1). Faith in the God-man, Christ Jesus, will steady the heart, no matter how intense the grief or how great the sorrow.

2. He Informed Them That He Was Going to the Father's House in Heaven to Prepare a Home for Them (v. 2). He assured them that there was abundant room for all. Heaven is an eternal dwelling place.

3. He Assured Them That He Would Come Again and Escort Them to Heaven (v. 3). Jesus will not wait for His own to come to Him, but will come and call forth from the graves those who have died, and transform living believers, and take them all to be with Himself in the heavenly home forevermore (1 Thess. 4:16-17).

II. Revealing the Way to the Father's House (vv. 4-11).

Jesus informed the disciples that they knew the place to which He was going and the way. To this Thomas interposed a doubt, in answer to which Christ asserts that He is

1. The Way to God (v. 6). He is something more than a mere guide or teacher. He is the way itself. He is the door of the sheep-fold.

2. The Truth (v. 6). He is not merely the teacher, but the truth incarnate. In His incarnation the spiritual and material worlds were united, therefore every line of truth whether spiritual or material converges in Him. No one who does not have Christ can ever have the real truth about anything. In Him we have the truth about man, what he is, what he ought to be, and what he shall be in eternity. In Him especially we have the truth about God.

3. The Life (v. 6). Christ is not merely the giver of life, but He is the essence of life. Only those who receive Christ have life in the true sense. Since He is God incarnate, to know Him is to know God.

III. Assuring Them That His Work Was to Continue (vv. 12-14).

Jesus' going away was not to end the work which He had begun. This no doubt meant that through the ministry of the Spirit-filled disciples, the work which Christ began would assume larger proportions. There would be a much greater number of conversions than under His ministry. After the Day of Pentecost the gospel did take a much wider range. During His ministry the message was confined to the Jews, while under the ministry of the disciples it was only limited by the world itself. The disciples' ministry was ushered in by the conversion of three thousand in one day.

IV. Promises Another Comforter (vv. 15-17).

The word comforter means literally one called to the side of another to give help, protection and deliverance. This comforter was the Holy Spirit. Jesus was the Comforter while here in the body. The Holy Spirit was to be "another comforter."

V. Assuring Them of His Return to Them (vv. 18-24).

Although Christ went away He did not leave His disciples as orphans. The Father and the Son make their abode with the disciples who love and obey Jesus Christ.

VI. Assuring Them That the Holy Spirit Would Aid Them in Remembering and Understanding His Words (vv. 25-26).

This the Holy Spirit does by illuminating the minds of the disciples.

VII. Giving the Legacy of His Peace (vv. 22-31).

By His peace is meant the serenity of soul which one enjoys who is reconciled to God, who knows that his sins are forgiven.

Doing Better

It is not a question of how much we are to do, but of how it is to be done. It is not a question of doing more, but of doing better.—John Ruskin.

Duty

Do the duty that lies nearest thee; which thou knowest to be a duty! The second duty will already become clearer.—Carlyle.

Worldly joy ends in sorrow; godly sorrow ends in joy.

SENATE AGAINST GUN ELEVATION

Rejects Amendment Carrying $6,500,000 for Change in Warship Range.

Washington.—The stand taken by the administration against an amendment to the naval appropriations bill which would provide money for the elevation of the guns on thirteen capital ships retained by the United States under the treaty for the limitation of naval armaments, was sustained in the senate. A motion by Senator McKellar (Dem., Tenn.) to have the rules set aside and an amendment made in order was defeated, 45 to 22.

Senator Johnson (Rep., Cal.) was the only Republican to support the McKellar motion. On the other hand, thirty-six Republican senators, representing almost every faction of the senate, and eight Democrats followed the administration leadership.

The vote followed a debate by Senator Hale (Rep., Maine), chairman of the naval affairs committee, and Senator McKellar, during which Mr. Hale declared that while he believed the guns on the battleships should be elevated to increase their range and bring the American fleet on a parity with that of Great Britain, and hoped they would be, he was opposed to action by the senate at this time along the lines suggested by Senator McKellar.

Senator Hale said that about two years ago when it was reported that Great Britain intended to elevate the guns on her capital ships, an appropriation of $6,500,000 was voted by congress to elevate the American guns, but subsequently this money had been returned to the treasury when it was learned that no such step was contemplated by Great Britain.

"The suggestion now presented by Senator McKellar, that money be appropriated again for gun elevation," said Senator Hale, "was a repetition of the action taken previously and he was of the opinion that it might embarrass the administration in its handling of the treaty."

Senator McKellar contended that while Great Britain had not elevated the guns on her capital ships, the provisions of the arms limitation treaty had left the English fleet in a stronger position than the American fleet, although equality of strength was the expressed purpose of the pact. The guns of British ships, he said, had greater range than those of thirteen of the capital ships retained by the United States.

"The American people," said Senator McKellar, "expect us to keep up the ratio of 5-5-3 and the only way to do that would be the elevation of the guns on our ships. I think it is our duty to keep up the 5-5-3 ratio."

Luther Tells Reichstag

He Will Back Dawes Plan

Berlin.—Promising to protect the Republican constitution and to follow both in foreign and internal policies the road charted by the Marx cabinet, Chancellor Hans Luther presented his ministry to the reichstag.

Luther promised the reichstag that his government would observe to the letter the provisions of the Dawes plan as embodied in the London agreement. He said the non-evacuation of Cologne was in open contradiction to the spirit of the principle created by the London agreement, and pledged that he would repeat the demand that the allies give proof of Germany's alleged failure to disarm. He promised also to negotiate for the early evacuation of Cologne, which he said, was vital to the nation's economic restoration.

Communists Strip Leon

Trotsky of War Power

Moscow.—Leon Trotsky was relieved of his duties as chairman of the revolutionary war council by the central executive committee of the Communist party, the most powerful political body in Russia.

The retiring war minister also is threatened with expulsion from the Communist party and from membership in all the important political bureaus unless he conforms to party discipline and renounces his attacks upon the principles enunciated by the late Nikolai Lenin.

Wheat Price Climbs to Level of $2.03 1-2

Chicago.—The $2 mark was passed again by wheat on Monday when red winter sold in the Chicago market at $2.03 1/2 a bushel. The advance of wheat caused flour prices to rise to the highest point since the World war.

Many of the small bakers, affected by the rise in flour prices, sold bread a cent higher, making it 8 1/2 cents for pound loaves and 10 1/2 cents for pound and a half size.

Bank Officials Indicted

Milwaukee.—W. C. Hood, president of the defunct American National Bank of Racine, and E. H. Freeman, a director, were indicted by the federal grand jury here. Each was liberated under $5,000 bonds.

For Child Labor Amendment

Phoenix, Ariz.—The lower house of the Arizona legislature on Monday afternoon passed the ratification resolution of the proposed child labor amendment.

SUFFERED AFTER BIRTH OF BABY

Trouble Caused by Getting Up Too Soon. Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Taleville, New York.—"I thought it would interest you to know what benefited me after taking your medicine. A few days after the birth of my third child I got up too quick. Then just before my fifth child was born I had inflammation of the bladder and displacement. Seeing your advertisement in a Liverpool (England) paper I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and that was the best confinement I had. Whenever I feel run-down I always take the Vegetable Compound as a tonic. We have just removed from Brockville (Canada) so I was pleased when the store ordered the medicine for me and I got it today. I would not be without it for any price and I recommend it to ladies around here because I feel so sure it will benefit any woman who takes it."—Mrs. AGNES WIGNALL, Taleville, New York.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve them from ills peculiar to their sex. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Three generations of Resinol Soap users in this family

Long Beach, Cal., June 23—"I wonder if you would care for this unsolicited testimonial. I began using Resinol Soap many years ago with my first baby. He and his wife are now using it for my two-year-old grandchild."

I have also two married daughters using it and one more daughter at home with the heaviest curly bobbed hair I ever saw. All my life people have asked what I used to make the children's hair so beautiful and to give them such clear, healthy complexions. I have had only two rules: Resinol Soap and good plain food.

You have one good booster here in the west not only for California but for the Resinol products." (Signed) Annie L. Brown, 1042 E. 16th St.

Easy Way to Break
Severest Cough

No matter how long you have had a persistent, weakening cough—no matter how many remedies you have tried without success—you can usually get relief instantly, and often relieve the entire cough condition in 24 hours, by a very simple method.

The method is based on a remarkable proscription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it, without following with water. The prescription has a double action.
It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. The prompt relief seems almost magical, and the quickness with which the whole cough condition disappears is often simply amazing. There is nothing better for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness, and almost every throat irritation. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. On sale at all good druggists. Ask for

by VICTOR ROUSSEAU

COPYRIGHT BY W.G. CHAPMAN

WHO gets closer to life than a doctor?
What other person comes more directly into daily contact with its romance, its hopes and defeats, its sordidness and its uplifting qualities? Who else has the drama of it all so constantly before his eyes?

This strange tale, eerie and mystifying in part, but filled with passionate interest and charm is the romance of a surgeon. Its heroine is a nurse. Its strongest scenes are in a sanitarium. One of its most effective climaxes takes place at an operating table. Edifying and thrilling; a story that engages the mind and the heart and does not permit interest to lapse for an instant. One of the most unusual and satisfactory of Victor Rousseau's many remarkable stories.
